AMERICAN DISPATCHES.

DUNSMUIR SETTLING THE WELLINGTON STRIKE.

Men at the Peninsula Accepted 75 Will Not Be Generally Recognized—Boston The Carpenters' Strike at Spokane Falls a Failure—Wonderful Mind Reading.

CHICAGO, Sept. 20.—Paul Alex Johnston, the mind-reader, has performed a feat which to all appearances disproves the theory that man possesses five senses, and also the belief that mind-reading is really a species of muscle-reading. In the presence of a large audience at the Wellington, hotel, Johnston was blindfolded, his ears and nostrils stuffed with cotton, and a lighted cigar placed in his mouth, to destroy for the time being hearing, sight, smell and taste, and thick gloves placed on his hands. He then requested the proprietor of the hotel to stand behind his chair and think of the combination of the safe. This was done, and without contact with the gentleman, the mind-reader turned correctly to all the numbers and opened the safe.

How a Strike Was Beaten.

SPOKANE FALLS, Sept. 20.—The carpenters' strike on the exposition building here is a failure. Bankers, merchants, professional men and capitalists gathered at the building this morning by the score, and all day long squads of non union men were brought up from private buildings and during the afternoon 150 carpenters were at work, and quite as many citizens were laying shingles and flooring. Nearly every banker in town responded to the call, and when night came the superintendent declared that more work and better results had been accomplished than on any previous day. A large number of strikers gathered upon the scene early in the morning, but the cheering of the workmen as now recruits kept arriving had a depressing effect upon them and they soon left.

Ruined by Drink.

PORT ANGELES, Sept. 19.—C. S. Favor, clerk for D. W. Morse, of this place, has been missing since Monday. He had been drinking heavily for some time, and last Saturday made out a fictitious check and deposited it in the money drawer and took out cash to the amount represented by the check. Mr. Morse, upon seeing the check, discharged Favor, who declared he was going to kill himself, and it is feared he has carried out his threat. His wife and child are in destitute circumstances. Favor was very popular and a good business man, but could not control his thirst for liquor. He came here from San Francisco.

Died at His Post.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—As the audience were leaving the New York theatre at 11.15 to-night a lineman was seen to climb the electric light pole in front of the theatre and many stopped to watch him. Suddenly it was seen that something was wrong. The man became limp and the sizzle of burning flesh was heard by the crowd below, who stood horrified. It happened that Superintendent Phipps, of the Brush Electric Light Company, had visited the theatre. He came out at this moment and, taking in the situation at a glance, procured assistance and released the man from his terrible position. But the victim was past all help, and died before he reached the hospital, whither he was taken as soon as possible. It was learned that the man's name was Napp, but no other information concerning him was obtainable.

BUSINESS MEN IN SESSION.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 18.—The annual meeting of the Pacific Coast Board of Commerce began Tuesday afternoon, Samuel Colyer of Tacoma presiding. Delegates are present from the San Francisco Produce Exchange, Portland Chamber of Commerce, Seattle Chamber of Commerce, Tacoma Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, California State Board of Trade, Pasadena Board of Trade, Fairhaven (Washington) Board of Trade, Astoria Chamber of Commerce, Helena (Montana) Board of Trade and Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce.

The following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That the Pacific Coast Board of Commerce request our senators and representatives in congress to use their influence to so modify the provisions of the tariff bill now under consideration that it may not unjustly discriminate against the Pacific Coast merchants. While three months is ample time for shipments made prior to August 1st to arrive at Atlantic ports, it is not so with Pacific Coast ports, and it would be only just and it would not injure any one if the present tariff should be continued to cover all shipments prior to August 1, 1890, without regard to time of arrival.

A WILD WESTER.

Uses His No. 12 Cowhides as Battering Rams.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—This has been another busy day in the House. The Democrats early resorted to their familiar fillibustering tactics against the Venable-Langstone contested election case. They vacated their seats and broke a quorum several times. A call of the House would be ordered each time/and when a quorum was announced the Democrats would again retreat to the corridors and the cloak rooms, then another call would be ordered and soon, under the call of the House, the doorkeepers would have difficulty in preventing bull-dozing Democrats from forcing their way out of the House chamber. Speaker Reed resolved to prevent this if possible, so he stationed an athletic fellow at the door immediately to the left of the desk. Kilgore, a wild Texas member, wanted a drink and wanted it badly. The doorkeeper told him he could not go out, whereupon Kilgore lifted his number 12 cowhide boot and fetched the door a kick which almost loosened it from its hinges and it flew back and hit little Dingley, of Maine, on the nose bringing the blood. Later in the afternoon the same episode was repeated by Cummings, of New York, who fetched the door a kick and broke it off its hinges. Kilgore was called on his carpet by the House authorities to do business and adjourned at 3.05.

STEVENSON'S PERIL.

How the Novelist Nearly Lost Valuable Manuscripts.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20.—During the trip between Samoa and Auckland, the vessel on which Robert Louis Stevenson was a passenger caught fire in the cabin. The sailors seized upon movable articles that had become ignited and hastened to pitch them overboard. Mrs. Stevenson, who was standing on deck watching the progress of the fire and preparing to leave the vessel when necessary, saw two of the crew dragging from below a large burning box and prepare to hurl it into the sea. Recognizing it in an instant as a box belonging to her husband, Mrs. Stevenson sprang forward with a cry of dismay, seized the nearest man by the arm and begged him to drop it. He did so, and after being deluged with water the box was saved. It contained all of Stevenson's unfinished manuscripts, the result of many months hard work, among them being a story he has written by order for a prominent magazine and for which he is to receive £4000, as well as a portion of the history of Samoa.

TEST OF ARMOR PLATES.

A Public Trial of Thick Steel Plates to Take Place Shortly.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—The ordnance bureau of the navy department will, within the next two weeks, conduct a series of armor tests at the Annapolis proving ground that will attract more attention among the naval authorities of the world than any previous armor tests. It will be the first trial of importance ever held that was not conducted secretly, and of which fair and impartial accounts will be published. In the European tests representatives of the press and foreign naval officers have always been excluded, and the only accounts published have been those given out by the makers of the plates, who have been, of course, interested in making the best possible showing for their wares. At the Annapolis test three leading types of European armor plating will be represented, all steel and nickle steel from Schneider & Co. from France and compound steel and wrought iron from Commel & Co., of Sheffield, England. Each plate will be eight feet high, six feet wide, and ten and a half inches thick. The makers have done their best on these plates for this trial will not only determine which type of plate the navy department will encourage the manufacture of in this country, but there is a decided opinion among naval officers that it will go far toward determining the type to be used in Europe.

THE STRIKERS WIN.

Dunsmuir Has Conceded a Number of the Demands of the Men.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 19.—The great Wellington coal boycott is in a fair way of being lifted. The Dunsmuirs, who run a mine, to-day conceded one of the main demands of the men, and show a disposition to concede the others. Dunsmuir is in San Francisco and has been conferring with John Williams, president of the retail grocers' association, who acted for the Federated trades. Dunsmuir has conceded the eight-hour clause, the time to begin, when the men shall report at the mouth of a shaft, and when to report off work. The other main question, that of union recognition, there is little doubt he will concede in some form or other satisfactory to the men.

COULD NOT ASK IT.

HON. MR. TUPPER ON THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION.

Says a Full Measure Would Be Acceptable—Mortuary Statistics Issued by the Department of Agriculture—Victoria's Death Rate—Other Notes.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—Mr. Tupper was interviewed to-day in regard to the Globe's special dispatch of yesterday from Washington, which says that the conference committee on the tariff has under consideration a very important measure relating to Canada. This alleged measure is simply an offer for all products and manufactures of Canada to enter the States free of duty the moment Canada reciprocates by admitting similar products and manufactures from the United States. Mr. Tupper says the dispatch is not worthy of serious consideration, judging from past events regarding reciprocity. Canada, he says, could not ask it herself. A full measure of reciprocity we would only accept.

Writs for election in South Victoria to the Commons, vacant by the death of Mr. Hudspeth, have been issued. The election will be held on the 11th October.

THE DEATH RATE.

Mortuary Statistics—Victoria Will Do Better After a Time.

Special to the TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The mortuary statistics for the month of August were issued by the Department of Agriculture to-day. The death rate for Winnipeg was 167 out of an estimated population of 25,000, and 163 for Victoria, B. C., out of a population of 22,000. The highest death rate was at St. Johns, Quebec, being 3.27 per thousand, and the lowest at Galt, .41.

Moussa Bey Caught.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 18.—Moussa Bey, the Kurdish Governor of Armenia, who was sentenced to exile for outrages perpetrated by him upon the Christians in that province, and who escaped from custody some time ago, has been captured near Brussa, fifty-seven miles southeast of Constantinople. He broke one of his legs in attempting to escape from the police.

TORN BY LIONS AND TIGERS.

A Menagerie Let Loose in Kimberly South Africa.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Advices from Kimberly, South Africa, tell of an awful occurrence there at midnight on June 1 last. Some person, evidently bearing ill-feeling toward the proprietors of the Tillis menagerie, opened the doors of the cages confining the wild animals, and most terrible scenes followed. Four attendants, sleeping on the premises, endeavored to round up the beasts, but were mangled beyond recognition, being actually torn limb from limb. The entire population within a radius of a mile, were aroused by the roaring of the lions, the trumpeting of the elephants and the growls and shrieks of the other wild beasts.

Having once tasted blood in their struggle with the employes, the beasts regained their natural ferocity, and sprang at every living thing in their way. A little child of James Grindley, in a rear room opening to a garden, was pounced upon by a chetah and dragged into the open air, where the agonized mother saw it torn to pieces and devoured before help could reach it. Other horrible incidents are reported, among them the killing of five women, who were horribly mangled.

When the malls left four lions, two lionesses, two tigers, three bears, two wolves, one hyena, one elephant, one camel and sixteen baboons, were still at large. The police have been organized in hunting parties and the people are keeping in doors.

THE PRIDE OF SPAIN.

The Fire at the Alhambra—Triumph of Arab Art.

MADRID, Sept. 20.—The fire at the celebrated Alhambra at Granada, destroyed the greater part of the Arab Palace, including the Hall of the Abencerrages, the Court of Lions, and the wonderful Mirador de la Reina. The loss is irreparable.

The magnificent Sala de la Barca and the right wing of the Arraynes court were destroyed. The remainder of the palace was not damaged.

Washington Irving has made us familiar with the beauties of the Alhambra, and his graceful description of the elegance of its construction and the oriental taste displayed in the ornamentation has left a lasting impression on those who have lingered over his pages. To all of these the intelligence that the magnificent pile has been almost irreparably injured, will be received with a feeling of genuine sadness.

The Alhambra stands on a hill overlooking the city of Granada on the north. The approach is made by a tunnel-like avenue of elms that runs along one of the terraces into which the hill is cut. Entrance is obtained through the Gate of Justice, over which is sculptured in stone the mystic key and hand, symbolic, as some imagine, of the belief of the Arabs that the Alcazar would not be opened to the enemies of the faith till the hand grasped the key. "No other King's palace," to quote from a recent description, "is like this; its fragile ornamentation seems eternal and its architects are unknown. It rose like a dream, a chiseled exhalation, the creation of poet and prophet, the first and fairest poem of the Arab land. Of the three well recognized periods of glory, which Arab art developed in Spain the purest, most typical and glorious was that exemplified within the noble precincts of the Granada palace."

The present Alhambra is an agglomeration of three distinct palaces, which, together with the palace, built by Charles V up against the Alhambra proper, which he destroyed, and a beautiful palace of the Moors, which he were torn down, made four palaces within a space not larger than the palace of Luxembourg in Paris. This addition, which Charles intended as an architectural embellishment, was never completed. Many of the rooms were Italianized by Philip V and others were deformed by partitions constructed after that monarch's narrow architectural notions. In 1812 several of the towers were blown up by the French, and in 1821 the whole pile was shaken and much damaged by an earthquake.

In 1862 Isabella, then upon the throne, ordered the restoration of the Alhambra, but funds were wanting for the work, and since then but little has been done to repair its marred and shattered beauties.

A FAMILY OF FIGHTERS.

This Had Five Sons and Seventeen of Them in the Union Army.

"If it came within line of his inclinations," added W. C. Moyer, of St. Clairsville, W. Va., to a reporter of the New York Sun, "the census enumerator for Moundsville, near where I live, must have found about as wonderful a domestic history as any enumerator will run against elsewhere in this country. I refer to a family of the name of Brandon. The father of that family, Charles Brandon, died when he was 96 years old, but his youngest child was less than a year old. He died just as the civil war broke out of a broken heart, his wife having refused to live with him any longer, and brought suit for divorce against him. He had at the time thirty-five living children, and had been married three times. His first wife bore him only two children. His second wife died after bearing him eighteen. At the age of 75 he married Sarah Barker, she being 16, and the youngest of sixteen children. She lived with him 21 years, bearing him fifteen children, and then left him, taking her year old baby with her and sued for a divorce on the ground of incompatability of temper. Brandon was still hale and hearty, but the desertion of his wife broke him down, and he died within a month after she left him.

"When the third wife married him the oldest of his twenty children by his two previous children was 39, and the entire twenty lived under the paternal roof. The young wife reared all of the twenty that were young enough to need rearing, besides caring for the fifteen of her own, the oldest of whom was 20 when she left their father. The family of thirty-five kept together for many years after their father's death, and if the patriarchial Brandon had lived a few months longer he would have seen seventeen of his sons enlist in the Union army. It is a question if in this or any other country an instance can be found where one family contributed seventeen sons to their country's service. There were two Charleses and two Johns among these brothers. The name of the other thirteen were Simeon, Evans, Peter, Josephus, Abraham, Hiram, James, Van Buren, Jacob, Alexander, David, Andrew, and Ruse. Besides these, three of Charles Brandon's sons served in the Mexican war. The seventeen brothers were all in Ohio and Indiana regiments. Two of them, one of the Johns and one of the Charlesses, were sons of the third Mrs. Brandon. They were both taken prisoners at the battle of Chicamanga and placed in Andersonville prison. John died in the prison. Charles was there twenty-one months when he escaped. All the rest of the sons were children of the second wife. They were in every important battle of the war, and all lived to get home when the war was over, except Peter, who was killed at Shiloh.

"These boys all came of good fighting stock, for their father was a famous Indian fighter himself, and a veteran of the war of 1812 and the Mexican war. When western Pennsylvania was the frontier, and the Indian fighter was the most important and indispensable person in the settlements, Charles Brandon, according to all tradition, was one of the best and most daring of all the active foes of the red men. His father was killed by Indians when Charles was only 3 years old. He himself was made a prisoner, and lived with the Indians twelve years, hating them more the longer he was with them. At the age of 15 he escaped, and after learning his mother tongue, spent all his time until they were driven away to remote settlements in hunting and killing Indians. He was 51 years of age when the war of 1812 broke out, and he was one of the first to join the American army, and was in it when peace was declared. He was 74 when he enlisted in the Mexican war.

"The third wife of this virile old fighter is living at Moundsville hale and hearty at the age of 87. She is over six feet high and as straight as an arrow. Of her thirty-five children and stepchildren, she knows positively of the whereabouts of but fifteen. The rest are scattered about the country and dead. The thirty-five children were all sons."

HIS GREATEST WORK.

A GLIMPSE AT THE PROOF SHEETS OF TALMAGE'S LIFE OF CHRIST.

A Striking Title, "From Manger to Throne"—Graphic Description of His Visit to the Christ Land—The Most Ambitious Literary Effort of His Life.

[Copyright by American Press Association.]

Few persons possess Dr. T. De Witt Talmage's most distinguishing characteristic—something to say, and the ability to clothe the thought in language fresh and striking. The great Brooklyn divine has given us another example of his tireless energy, his great study and his matchless powers in his life of Christ—"From Manger to Throne"—to be issued in a few days from the press of the Historical Publishing company, of Philadelphia. Through the courtesy of Mr. H. S. Smith, president of the company, I am enabled to tell something about the work in advance, for I have seen the proof sheets.

ARAB INHABITANTS.

The book differs from all other lives of the Christ in this, that it is a simple narrative in which no theological questions are propounded, no "views" extolled, and there is no straining after effect.

It is made up of 600 pages, with over 400 engravings, copies of famous paintings by the old masters illustrating scenes in the life of Christ and portraits of the Saviour by many famous painters. In addition there is a splendid panorama of the crucifixion in colors, ten feet in length, which is a great achievement of the publishers.

As a literary effort the book is the most ambitious of the great preacher's life. It fulfills all the requirements of literary style and finish. Each fact was carefully weighed and scrutinized before put on paper. Nothing was taken for granted. It is not the work of an idle hour, but rather the life work of a strong man still in his prime. It should meet with a cordial welcome. It is not written above the head of the average reader. On the contrary, it is a series of magnificent word pictures, so simple that a child would be interested in them. The reader is taken to every spot made remarkable in the Holy Land, and the guide is like a delightful elder brother sitting in the twilight rehearsing the old, old story, ever new.

"I have been writing that book for thirty-five years," Dr. Talmage told me recently, and he supplements this in his preface by saying:

"In my American home, on the Atlantic, on the Mediterranean, on camel's back, on mule's back, on horseback, under chandelier, by dim candle in tent, on Lake Galilee, in convent, at Bethel, where Jacob's pillow was stuffed with dreams and the angels of the ladder landed; at the brook Elah, from which little David picked up the ammunition of five smooth stones, four more than were needed for crushing like an egg-shell the skull of Goliath; in the valley of Ajalon, over which, at Joshua's command, Astronomy halted; on the plain of Esdraelon, the battlefield of ages, its long red flowers suggestive of the blood dashed to the bits of the horses' bridles; amid the shattered masonry of Jericho, in Jerusalem, that overshadows all other cities in reminiscence; at Cana, where plain water became festal beverage; on Calvary, whose salant and ruptured rocks still show the effects of the earthquake at the awful hemorrhage of the five wounds that purchased the world's rescue, and with my hand mittened from the storm, or wet from the Jordan, or bared to the sun, or gliding over smooth table, this book has been written."

Dr. Talmage is the only author of a life of the Christ who visited the Holy Land for the purpose of seeing for himself the scenes made famous by the birth and crucifixion of the Saviour, and this record of his life is one of the most interesting portions of the book. The writer vividly portrays the visit of Mary and Joseph in Egypt:

"Over the hills and down through the deep gorge they urge their way. By Hebron, by Gaza, through hot sand, under a blistering sun, the babe crying, the mother faint, the father exhausted. How slowly the days and weeks pass. Will the weary three ever reach the banks of the Nile? Will they ever see Cairo? Will the desert ever end? When at last they cross the line beyond which old Herod has no right to pursue their joy is unbounded. Free at last! Let them dismount and rest. Now they resume their way with less anxiety. They will find a place somewhere for shelter and the earning of their bread. Here they are at Cairo, Egypt. They wind through the crooked streets, which are about ten feet wide, and enter the humble house where I have been today. It is nine steps down from the level of the street. It is such a place as no reader of this book would like to dwell in. I measured the room, and found it 20 feet long and 7½ feet high. There are three shelvings of rock, one of which I think was the cradle of our Lord. There is no window, and all the light must have come from lantern or candle. What a place for the king of heaven to live in!"

As he approaches Jerusalem the doctor can hardly contain himself. He is sitting on a patient camel's back writing these words: "Along the route I am amazed beyond expression at the boldness and jaggedness of the scenery of the Holy Land. I expected to see it rough, but not Alpinian and Sierra Nevadian in grandeur. The hills are amphitheatres, piled up galleries of gray rock, with intervals of soil, brown and maroon, until the eye and head and heart surrender, and the lip that for a long while were exclamatory becomes speechless. Before sundown we will see Jerusalem. I never had such high expectations of seeing any place as of seeing the holy city. I found myself singing, 'Jerusalem, My Happy Home,' while dressing myself this morning. I think my feelings may be slightly akin to that of the Christian just about to enter the heavenly Jerusalem."

Then follows a graphic picture of the great city, and the visitor's thoughts as his eyes beheld it for the first time.

Dr. Talmage gives a description of a baptism in the Jordan. He says:

"Yesterday on horseback we left Jericho, and having dipped in the flood we came with a feeling that we cannot describe upon the Jordan, a river which more people have desired to see than any other. On our way we overtook an American, who requested me to baptize him by immersion in the river Jordan. We dismounted at the place were Joshua and his host once crossed the river dry shod. We were near a turn in the river, and not far off from where rocks and sand are piled up in shape of cathedrals, domes and battlements. We pitched our tent, and after proper examination of the candidate for baptism I selected portions of Scripture appropriate. One of our Arab attendants had a garment not unlike a baptismal robe. With that garment girdled around me I led the candidate down under the trees on the bank, while near by were groups of friends and some strangers who happened to be there. After a prayer I read of Christ's baptism in the Jordan and the commission, 'Go, teach all nations, baptizing them.' The people on the bank then joined in singing to the familiar tune that soul stirring song, 'On Jordan's Stormy Bank I Stand.' With the candidate's hands in mine we waded deep into the Jordan, and I then declared, 'In this historical river, where the Israelites crossed, and Naaman plunged seven times for the cure of his leprosy, and Christ was baptized, and which has been used in all ages as a symbol of the dividing line between earth and heaven, I baptize thee in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.' As the candidate went down under the waves and then rose I felt a solemnity that no other scene could have inspired. As the ordinance was observed under the direction of no particular denomination of Christians, and no particular church could be responsible for it, I feel it my duty to report what I did to the church universal."

Dr. Talmage's description of his departure from Jerusalem is characteristic:

"Now we leave Jerusalem for the long journey north through Palestine. A little way out we got on a hill and took the last look at Jerusalem, and I felt and remarked it was the last look at that sacred city on earth, and the next Jerusalem we shall see will be the heavenly. We went on within sight of Mizpah and Gibeon, where Joshua commanded the sun to stand still; on by Rama, connected with Samuel's history; on by the traditional village where the parents of Christ missed their boy, about three and a half miles from Jerusalem. This is the road over which Jesus came and went from Jerusalem to Nazareth. To-night we encamp at Bethel, where was once a school of the prophets, a theological seminary. Elijah and Elisha were here. Near this Abraham and Lot divided the land. Here Jacob, pillowed on a stone, saw the ladder used by angels' feet, and he set up a stone and consecrated it. To-night the heavens were full of ladders—first a ladder of clouds, then a ladder of stars, and all up and down the heavens are the angels of beauty, angels of consolation, angels of God ascending and descending. 'Surely God is in this place,' said Jacob, 'and I knew it not.' But to-night God is in this place, and I know it!"

The doctor has this to say about tradition, history and fact before beginning the real work of the book:

"Are the places that I see in Palestine and Syria and the Mediterranean isles the genuine places of Christly, patriarchal and apostolic association? Many of them are not, and many of them are. We have no sympathy with the bedwarfing of tradition. There are traditions contradicted by their absurdity, but if for several generations a sensible tradition goes on in regard to events connected with certain places, I am as certain of the localities as though pen and document had fixed them. Indeed, sometimes tradition is more to be depended on than written communication. A writer may, for bad purposes, misrepresent, misconstrue, mistate; but reasonable traditions concerning places connected with great events are apt to be true. I have no more doubt concerning the place on which Christ was crucified or in which Christ was buried than I have about the fact that our Lord was slain and intombed. But suppose traditions contradict each other? Then try them, test them, compare them as you do documents. It is no more difficult to separate traditions, true and false, than apocryphal books from inspired books. Do not use the word tradition as a synonym for delusion. There is a surplus of Christian infidels traveling the Holy Land who are from scalp to heel surcharged with unbeliefs. A tradition may be as much divinely inspired as a book. The scenery of Palestine is interjoined, intertwisted, interlocked with the Scriptural occurrences. The learned Ritter, who has never been charged with any weakness of incredulity, writes: 'No one can trace without joy and wonder the verification which geography pays to the history of the Holy Land.'

"When the brilliant Renan went to Palestine he was stuffed with enough incredulity to make a dozen Thomas Paines, and yet he gives the following experience: 'The marvelous harmony of the evangelical picture, with the country which serves as its frame, was to me a revelation. I had before my eyes a fifth gospel, mutilated but still legible; and ever afterward in the recitals of Matthew and Mark, instead of an abstract being that one would say has never existed, I saw a wonderful human figure live and move.' So said an unbeliever. In this my visit to Palestine, in the year of our Lord 1889-90, I also find the landscape a commentary. The rivers, the mountains, the valleys, the lakes, the rocks, the trees, the costumes of the Holy Land, agree with Matthew and Mark and Luke and John. The geography and topography are the background of the Gospel pictures. They carry a different part of the same song. Admit Palestine and you admit the New Testament. A distinguished man years ago came here and returned and wrote, 'I went to Palestine an infidel and came home a Christian.' My testimony will be that I came to Palestine a firm believer in the Bible, and return a thousand fold more confirmed in the divinity of the Holy Scriptures."

Quite as interesting as anything else in the book is this announcement:

"Wandering up and down the chief art galleries of Europe I have looked for a face of the Saviour which I would like to have in my life of Christ. The one I have chosen in preference to all is that executed by a young painter.

"I have no idea that the Fourteenth century, or the Nineteenth century, or any century, monopolizes all the brain. I think the best music is yet to be composed, the best sculpture yet to be chiseled, the best paintings are yet to be presented to the world. We are almost always disappointed with a picture of Christ. It is the universal criticism of such pictures, 'While I admire the artistic merit of this production, the picture is not my idea of the Saviour.' The picture is apt to represent Christ either as effeminate or severe, weak or awful. To commingle in one picture strength and humility, suffering and triumph, the lionlike and the lamblike, the face that frowned the bestormed lake into a calm, and yet was such an invitation to babyhood that children tumbled from their mothers' arms into his bosom—that was what I was looking for, and that I have found, and that we present to our readers.

"I think it will satisfy more people than any other face that has ever been put on canvas. The cranial development of this picture of Christ is marvelous, and different from anything previously produced. We must not forget that he was not only a Christ of great heart, but also of great head. Most other paintings of our Lord were made from models. This artist had no model. He feels that it was an inspiration, and I believe it was. The German is apt to paint a German Christ, the Italian an Italian Christ, the Frenchman a French Christ, the Spaniard a Spanish Christ. But it was left for our artist, in whose veins commingle the blood of many nationalities, to paint for us 'The World's Christ!' Blessed be his glorious name forever!"

The public will be curious to see the work of this new painter.

Perhaps the good doctor has found a new Correggio!

There are a great many other features too numerous to even mention in a newspaper article. The readers will find these for themselves, and will probably lay down the book, as I did the proof sheets, with a new knowledge of the Christ, and a higher appreciation of Dr. Talmage's splendid ability.

FOSTER COATES.

English Clothiers and Customers.

One of the best reasons why London business houses become so ancient is because it is so hard to wind up their affairs. Hundreds of pounds must go out in credit before the first shilling can be said to be earned. As long as the business lasts new credits take the place of old ones, and the importance of a concern is determined by the number of people able to pay when they get good and ready whose names appear on its credit books.

A British tradesman will fall with triple the assets in outstanding accounts required to liberate his indebtedness, because he considers it little short of a crime to bother Sir Clarence or to dun Lord Charles. Accounts of this kind are sought after and encouraged, while those who run them up know full well that the fact of their patronage is being laid great stress on in dazzling plebeian patrons with the importance of their co-customers. The one saving feature of the system is that the aristocratic patron never deserts his appointed tradesman except for good cause, and never fails to recommend him on every occasion.—Cor. Clothier and Furnisher.

He Saved Something.

We meet many peculiar characters in this world. I ran across a man once—and he was a man of intelligence and a man of splendid family, wealthy and all that—who lost his wife, and who, in telling me of his bereavement, said:

"Well, I will save something out of the wreck. I can wear her stockings. See here," and he rolled up his pantaloons. Sure enough, there were women's stockings of fine texture and reaching away above the knee. He proceeded to explain that he had bought her several pairs at $2 each just a week before she died, but she had never had any use of them, and he would have to wear them out, though he was sorry he had bought them.

The idea was so funny that it was all I could do to keep from laughing right out, as the saying is, but the man was so very serious that I repressed the inclination to do so. I told him it was sad, but as long as he could save something out of the wreck by wearing his dead wife's hosiery he was not in such a bad fix, but still he could not see the ludicrous side of his narrative.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Story of an Intelligent Cat.

A New Hampshire physician sends me the following cat story, for which he vouches:

"Among other queer tricks Dick will take off my glasses very carefully with his paw, hold them with one claw and survey them with great apparent interest.

"The first time he did this was one night when he had been napping and I reading. He is a great pet, and going to him I bent over, without indicating by any motion my meaning, and said gently:

"'Dick, if you want to go to bed take off my glasses.'

"He immediately reached up a paw and took them off as deftly as though it were an old habit. Thinking this a 'happen so' I put them on and made the same request in different words, with precisely the same result. After one more repetition he yawned and plainly intimated that was enough."—Philadelphia Times.

Still Hustling.

An energetic young man with a taste for newspaper work succeeded in obtaining employment on one of the New York dailies. He had said that all he wanted was a start, and he was as busy as a buzz saw thereafter. One day a friend stopped him in his impetuous chase after fame long enough to ask him how he was getting along. "Oh, I am doing splendidly," the young man answered with enthusiasm.

"Have you written anything yet?"

"Yes, indeed I have. I wrote ten columns and a half last week; all good stuff, too."

"That is good. I am glad to know that you are doing so well. Your last week's work must have paid you pretty well."

"No, not so very well," said the young writer hesitatingly; "you see they have not printed any of my matter yet."—New York Times.

A FAST PASTOR.

He Will Not Give up His Race Horses—His Congregation Will Stand by Him.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 18.—The district conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which is in session here, has on its docket the case of Rev. J. W. Arney, the liberal-minded Methodist minister of Saranac, who owns and loves fast horses, and not many weeks ago gave a little trot of his own. The reverend gentleman has been cited to explain his conduct, and the fact that the surplus funds from the meeting were applied to the reduction of the church debt has not tended to assuage the wrath of his elder brethren.

Both the bishop and the presiding elder have talked with Pastor Arney, but without avail, as Arney takes the ground that there is nothing in divine writ which prohibits a preacher of the word from admiring God's creation in the matter of fleet-footed animals and despite the remonstrances, he has not only maintained but also increased his stable. When the formal charges have been presented Pastor Arney will ask the conference to determine for what purpose the Creator gave to man animals sleeker, better working and of greater speed than others of the species unless it were that he intended that their superior abilities should be made manifest in the sight of all.

This query is likely to prove a poser for the conference, and if that body is once inclined to concede that there must have been some ulterior design in creating fleet-footed animals, then it be conceded also by a theological conference that it is also right to demonstrate and exhibit the superior abilities of the superior class of the species in question.

Pastor Arney himself is not at all worried over the outlook. His flock at Saranac sticks by him and he knows it. He has preached many a sermon and drawn many a moral lesson from his stable, and in so doing, as he says himself, he has brought forth fruits meet for repentance.

As to the right of the conference to take action in the matter, Pastor Arney says: "The church cannot dictate to me what I shall do or what I shall not do beyond a certain limit. I am not going out of my way in the least to apologize or to attempt a vindication. I have done nothing wrong and am perfectly willing to abide by the result. If I see fit to give another horse race in the future that is my affair, and I do not concede that a church has any right to interfere with me so long as I serve my people as a pastor."

His congregation is very fond of him, and backs him through thick and thin in the contest.

The Deadliest of Serpents.

The cobra destroys less life in the aggregate than the various forms of cholera, cholera inorbus, cholera infantum, diarrhœa, dysentery, cramps, colic, etc. Mortality in Canada from these causes is light, owing to the general use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which is an unfailing specific for all bowel complaints.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW, SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when a kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

A NEW YORK LETTER.

THE MITIGATION OF ELECTRICITY AS A POWER.

A Paper Mill Requiring Five Hundred Horse Power to Use It—Water Powers [illegible] Its Uses [illegible]

From our own Correspondent.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—One of the most important subjects at present is the introduction of electricity. We hear of it for use in lighting, power and heat, and with these branches added to the already well established telegraph and telephone service of the country, it is not surprising to learn that their are hundreds of thousands of men doing nothing but manufacture electrical appliances for use in these various branches. The census thus taken will undoubtedly inform us to what extent this industry has grown; but we have daily illustrations of its magnitude in the increase of lines of street cars in the larger cities, and the power and lighting plants which are daily being incorporated. One large paper plant has within the past few weeks contracted for a complete outfit for driving its works, utilizing a water power situated over a mile from the mill, and delivering some 400 horse power night and day from Sunday midnight to Saturday midnight. This of course is a very hard situation, but if the venture proves to be a success, many more mills will be induced to place their works on lines of railway and near towns where they can get help and supplies conveniently, and make prompt and easy shipments of manufactured goods, bringing their power from some distant point.

Transmission of cars by electricity for city travel has become so common that no town is complete without its electrical road, and while there is more or less danger from contact with the wires, those making appliances for power transmission will without doubt find means before long whereby this trouble will be removed. Water powers in many parts of the country are being utilized for power plants, and some of them are projected on an enormous scale. The United States Government at Rock Island, Ill., is erecting a plant which will have 41 water wheels, and power will be generated for operating all the shops in the ordinance department situated at that point. Within a few weeks the writer saw a plan which had just been accepted, which will make Spokane Falls one of the most important of towns dependant on electrical power—this plant having some 30 or more wheels set in the most substantial manner for producing power in the best possible way. Rochester, N. Y., has a very large power plant, and there are at the present time over 500 motors at work in that city. By this power a small shop-keeper can have a one horse power motor at his service for every day in the year for the trifling sum of 25 cents per day, and for $18 tailor shops are furnished power for a whole year, and where cool air is needed, a fan motor will be run for six months in the year for $15.

These are only a few of the many illustrations which might be given of the growing use of electricity in small industries. The transmission of electricity from the generating station to the place where it is to be used is said to be more cheaply accomplished than the transmission of any other kind of power, and the loss in horse power is said to be less; further the motor requires little if any attention more than must be given to any ordinary piece of machinery, and when not in motion, there is no attention needed. The motor system can be used in many places where steam is not practicable as the motor is light, easily placed, and adds nothing to the fire risk, as there is little if any heat from a power motor.

The idea of using electricity on our great railways is being advocated somewhat on the same plan as that used for street railways, and if it becomes generally used, there will be a great saving of waste power—in fact, the idea is being developed at the present time on a railway, building in the Russian Empire, and as this road will travel through a very cold section, it is particularly desirable as there will be no water to freeze nor steam to generate, but the power will be delivered to the trains from fixed stations.

One of the latest and most approved uses for electricity is for the transmission of mails. It is proposed to erect a line with traveling trolleys somewhat on the same order as the system used in moving street cars, and suspend receptacles for holding mail matter from the wire by means of these trolleys. The first line of this description projected will be from Buenos Ayres to Montevideo in South America. The distance to be covered will be something over 180 miles, and it is calculated that the entire distance can be traversed in less than two hours. Some day, and probably not far distant, we will travel in all directions with electricity as a motive power, and then we shall appreciate, if we do not now, what a great factor this force is about which we know so little, and which is being put to so many new uses.

NELSON NOTES.

Mining News From the Kootenay—A Growing Town in the Mountains.

Now that he is required to handle mails four days a week, Postmaster Gilger says he should have an assistant; but, as his salary is only $50 a year, he does not see how he can pay a good reliable man more than five cents a day.

That there is something in the Trail Creek country besides wind is evidenced by the fact that one house at Spreat sells from $200 to $1200 worth of supplies a day for that camp.

From a gentleman who recently returned from the Lardo, the Miner learns that there is a large area of good ranching land in the bottoms along that river. He claims that the snow disappears as early up there as at any point on Kootenay Lake. The land, though, is either covered by timber limits or railway or reclamation reserves.

Ninety-nine head of as fine beef steers as ever eat bunch grass are now chewing the cud of contentment in a little valley up the mountains five miles to the east of Nelson. They are part of the band brought in from the Okanogan by Messrs. Lee, Wilson, and are expected to supply the demand of all the mining camps east of Kootenay Lake.

Hereafter mails will arrive at Nelson on Tuesdays and Fridays at 6 p.m., and depart on Mondays and Thursdays at 7 a.m. Mails will be closed on Sundays and Wednesdays at 8 p.m. to allow the mail carrier to leave promptly on schedule time.

The Kootenay Lime Company burned their first kiln of lime this week at the Blue Bell mine on the east side of Kootenay Lake. As soon as barrels can be obtained, shipments will be made. It is pronounced a first-class article, and if allowed in duty free would soon take the place of the lime used in Spokane Falls.

It is believed that the successful bidders on the Grohman excavation work were not the lowest, but the work was awarded them because they were known to be opposed to the employment of Chinese, while lower bidders intended doing the work with Chinese.

The result of the call appearing in last week's Miner is a 150-foot addition to the wharf landing. All our business men except one, cheerfully contributed money or labor towards the work. The one exception, although handling more freight over the wharf this summer than any other business man in Nelson, did not see his way clear to "hire a man to loaf round sawing logs." Hereafter he will pay wharfage or build a wharf for his own convenience. The owners of the Galena contributed $10 towards the work.

In all new communities like Nelson many necessary conveniences can only be had by contributions of either labor or money. These contributions should be cheerfully given, as they result in public and not individual good. Luckily for Nelson, there is but one business man within its limits whose love for the almighty dollar makes him ridiculous. The average man from eastern Canada is "close," but the closeness soon wears off. Perhaps it may wear off the one in Nelson.

The right-of-way on the Columbia & Kootenay is cleared to the 130 station, a point about two miles west of Nelson. The track is within two miles of the Slocan, and will be up to that stream next week. The length of time it remains there depends entirely on the progress made on the bridge, suitable timbers being hard to get, it is said. That the road will be in navigable water before the season closes this fall is very doubtful, for the reason that it is almost impossible to get new men to work for the wages offered, and the contractors cannot pay more and come out even on the work. The grading between Nelson and the crossing of the Kootenay is principally rock work, and it is thought now that men will be kept on it all winter.

WHEN THE END COMES.

How Changes the Earth Will Undergo When That Happens.

The changes in Orion, Saturn, and the moon are indeed suggestive of change—types, they may be called, of the first stage, the middle, and the last that matter passes through in the long process of the evolution of worlds.

And, of all changes, that change has most interest for us which affects our own planet, the earth; it has reached a earlier stage than Saturn, tho' not so late a stage as the moon; but only in long ages and minute effects will further changes be noticed.

Ages hence it may be discovered that there is some slight change in the earth's orbit; or Mercury, yet nearer to the sun than we, may be seen to pursue a smaller orbit than now, and the terrible fact may come home to man that we are drawing nearer to the sun. Time goes on, and the tropics become too hot for existence, and colder regions find a welcome change to warmth.

Age by age goes by, and the end is visibly no nearer; but the figures of astronomers only too surely tell their tale.

Now the tropics are in an impassable desert, and all the life on the globe congregates around the poles; Spain has lost her vineyards and the Alps their snow; England is a burning desert, and Greenland teems with the vegetation of the tropics; in smaller and smaller circles the inhabitants gather round the poles. "But," to quote the words of Mr. Keighley Miller, "the narrowed circle of the habitable earth can no longer support this vast increase of population, and famine begins to mow down its victims by millions.

"Now, indeed, the end of all life on the earth draws on apace. * * * The heat and drought become more and more insupportable, rain and dew fall no longer. All springs of water fail and the rivers dwindle down to streamlets, and trickle slowly over their stony beds, and now scarcity of food. Those who escape from the famine perish by the drought, and those whose escape from the drought are reserved for a fate more awful yet. For a time the few remaining inhabitants are partially screened from the overwhelming power of the sun by a dense canopy of clouds formed by the evaporation of every lake and sea.

"But soon the sun scorches up these vapor banks, and dissipates them into space as fast as they can form. Then the fiery orb shines out in unutterable splendor without the lightest cloud or breath to interpose between himself and his victims. Then the last denizens of the world are stricken down and consumed; the last traces of organic life are blotted from from its surface."—Longman's Magazine.

GENEROUS UNCLE SAM.

The recent money panic in New York was brought about in this way. The passage of the McKINLEY bill regarded as a foregone conclusion the importers began to make heavy purchases, buying goods, in fact, for next year's trade. The duty on these goods amounted to $50,000,000 and required to be paid by Oct. 6th. Wall street was unable to meet the demand. In consequence of the inability to raise the money through the usual channels, the importers applied to Secretary WINDOM for relief and that gentleman responded with a proposition to extend the time in which the duties may be paid until February 1st. Says the San Francisco Call, treating of the matter:

Importers are not to be censured for an effort to get goods into the country at the lowest rates of duty, but as their gain would be the country's loss, a Secretary of the Treasury less disposed than Mr. WINDOM to listen to complaints coming from the financial centre of the country would have told the importers that a concerted movement on their part to reduce the revenue of the Government below what the law intended, should be conducted at their own risk. There was nothing criminal in the transaction; the importers had a legal right to increase imports in anticipation of high tariff rates, but they could hardly ask the Government to aid them in their enterprise. But Uncle Sam is an exceedingly good-natured sort of fellow, and through his representative he said to the importers who had been trying to keep a little money from coming into his pocket, that as they could not conveniently carry the transaction through without assistance, he would extend a helping hand.

SHIP-BUILDING BUSINESS.

From time to time those ultra-loyal advocates of trade restriction who hypocritically boast of "drawing their inspiration from British institutions," pretend that Great Britain's commerce is on the decline—that the mother country is being driven out of the world's markets by competitors. The very reverse is the fact. The production of British factories is on the increase, the wages of British artizans, miners, general laborers and factory operatives are steadily increasing, and Great Britain is now, in a greater degree than ever, the mistress of the seas. The very attitude of defiance assumed by British statesmen, merchants and manufacturers toward the rest of the world, the abolition of all duties upon goods imported into the United Kingdom and the general invitation to all the races of the earth to compete against Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen on equal terms if they can, is enough to command the admiration of the world, and proclaim not only the sturdy self-reliance of JOHN BULL, and his contempt for artificial, unfair or dishonest advantages in trade, but the superiority of British products. In nothing is the superiority of the British policy so manifest as in the ship-building business. Looking at the ship-building returns of the world, as reported by LLOYD'S Register, we find that there were built in 1889, 1,090 steam and sailing vessels—exclusive of those under 100 tons—compared with 765 in 1888. The total tonnage built in 1889 throughout the world was 1,502,629 compared with 926,528 tons in 1888. The increase in ship-building in 1889 was therefore 325 vessels, and 576,106 tons or a gain of over 62 per cent. in tonnage. Of the 1,090 vessels built in 1889 Great Britain built 656, or nearly two-thirds of the whole and the tonnage built in Great Britain reached 1,180,346 out of a total of 1,502,629, or considerably more than three-fourths of the world's total. In other words Great Britain built in 1889 over three times as much shipping as all the rest of the world put together. Germany came second, but far behind, with 101,984 tons built in 1889, the United States third with 84,882 tons, France fourth with 42,921, and the British colonies fifth with 27,592. The bulk of the ships built in 1889 were steam vessels. There were 796 steam vessels, with a tonnage of 1,239,502 tons, built last year, as compared with 334 sailing vessels, with a tonnage of 241,827 tons. Of the steamships launched last year 582, or seventy-six per cent., were built in the United Kingdom. In tonnage of steam vessels built Great Britain makes even a better showing, having built 1,061,061 tons out of a total of 1,269,862. As regard the construction of steam vessels, Germany comes second with 82,878 tons, France fourth with 41,342 tons and the United States a bad fifth with 28,372 tons. The average size of steamships build in the United Kingdom last year was 1,823 tons, compared with an average of 1,646 for the whole world. The steamship tonnage built in Great Britain increased from 699,613 tons in 1888 to 1,061,067 in 1889. The statistics of the carrying trade show that Great Britain holds as high a place in the ownership of steam and sailing vessels as in the business of building them.

SIX COGENT QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

The London, Ont., Free Press offers for the delectation of its readers "Six cogent objections" to reciprocity. Here they are:

1st. Because it would ruin many of our industries.

2nd Because it would involve a cruel discrimination against Great Britain.

3rd. Because it would disturb the development of interprovincial trade.

4th. Because our farmers would find no compensation for the loss of their valuable home market.

5th. Because we are not yet prepared for the revolution which it would bring.

6th. Because it would lead to the neglect of our best foreign market—Great Britain.

The quickest way to answer these six questions is by asking six questions in return.

1st. Which are paramount, the interests of the farmers and other producers of raw products, or the interests of "many of our industries?"

2nd. Shall Canada impoverish herself that a "cruel discrimination against Great Britain shall be avoided?" Does not England buy where she can buy the cheapest?

3rd. Must localities suffer that interprovincial trade shall not be disturbed?

4th. If the home market is so valuable how is it that even Sir JOHN MACDONALD admits that the McKINLEY bill is a serious blow to Canada?

5th. If Canada is not yet prepared for the revolution it would bring (a glittering generality this), will she ever be?

6th. Does it reasonably follow that as business men Canadians, for all that reciprocity existed, would neglect the British market, that market an object worth watching?

No country was ever more unfavorably situated than Canada for the operation of protection, and inter-provincial trade. Canada's known resources are represented by four grand geographical divisions, the Maritime Provinces, the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia. The commercial affinities of these four grand divisions are to the southward rather than eastward and westward. The States are the natural market for the Maritime Provinces, Ontario and Manitoba, while British Columbia as a minera', lumber and coal producing country has no more in common with Manitoba and the Eastern Provinces generally than she has with Iceland. British Columbia's market lays to the south and she can also buy her groceries cheaper there than anywhere else. Geography, topography, climate, and character of resources make British Columbia look southward rather than eastward, and we find that that is peculiar to all the provinces. No system of protection that can be devised can overcome the normal trend of business.

A FALSE MOVE.

Without doubt the double arrest of DILLON and O'BRIEN was strictly within the law, and it is questionable whether it will contribute in the least towards the allaying of Irish discontent. The Irish question is an anomaly in politics. In studying political questions we are able, usually, to reach a conclusion as to the merits of the respective sides. The more, however, the Irish question is pondered the more mystifying it becomes. It is represented on either sides by able and conscientious men. Which are right and which are wrong, or is it not more likely that error is commingled with the contentions of both. On the one hand we are told that landlordism takes away the fruits of the producers of labor; on the other hand we are told that distress in Ireland is the consequence of thriftlessness. We may easily suppose there is truth in both these statements. The mistake that England seems to be making in the matter is, that she is undertaking to uphold a system that is as good as doomed. Landlordism is bound to pass away. The trend of opinion among the masses is all in that direction. Men who have no especial affection for Ireland and the Irish, regarding them as inherently turbulent, are drawn toward them because of the economic aspect of the contest in which they are engaged. Eliminate landlordism from the Irish question and so far as Irish independence is concerned, or for that matter home rule is concerned, not a corporal's guard of sympathisers on this continent outside of the Irish themselves. So long, however, as the principle of vested rights obtains, England is bound to protect her landlords. But the land question will not down. England may get every man in Ireland under arrest, but the opposition to landlordism will still remain unconquerably intense.

NOT A FAIR SAMPLE.

The press of the south is recording as a curiosity of crime the death recently in Birmingham, Alabama, of a young man, who since 1884 had committed seven murders. His first victims were a woman and a girl, whom he shot dead because they would not give him some money. He was then seventeen. The young ruffian's next victim was a negro who was threatening his daughter, from insult. His next affair was an exhibition of mere wantonness. Seeing an inoffensive negro go by, he told a friend to watch the "nigger" drop. The negro did drop, because he was shot dead by the murderer's revolver. Finally, in a quarrel he shot a man he was quarrelling with, and, while about it, added the latter's landlady and a friend of hers to the list. The law now stepped in and took notice of these trifling irregularities, but he escaped the gallows, and died in his bed at last. So much for American justice.

American affairs are none of our affairs and hence we need not rejoin to the implication above set forth. We may say, however, that the above represents not so much American justice as Southern injustice. In classing the "trifling irregularities" of an Alabama gentleman as an instance of American justice, the Americans might well point to "the plan of campaign" in Ireland as an instance of British justice. We do not understand that the idiosyncrasys of a locality may be made a criterion of the character of the whole nation. If this rule may be employed other countries than the United States would suffer. If society may be held responsible for the behavior of its units, how much superior is the society of Alabama, morally, to that of the detested negro? By what right may the South claim that the negro shall not exercise the right of citizenship. But, despite this influence, the consensus of opinion on this continent is to the effect that the negro is unfit to exercise the right of suffrage. Does not this seem slightly inconsistent? For all of our superior intelligence and alleged fine sense of justice, it still makes a vast difference to us whose bull is gored. We still make virtue a necessity. Morals are made hobby horses of by scoundrelly politicians as a means to the achievement of their ends.

THE GLADSTONE OF REAL LIFE.

The new English weekly paper, the Speaker, which has been started by the Liberal party in England to supersede the weekly Spectator, has the following remarks about Mr. GLADSTONE. The Spectator is a "lapsed" Liberal, and is now an organ of the Unionists, but its best known writer, Mr. HUTTON, who was half proprietor, seceded from it after a period of ignoble hesitation, and now it has less influence than the effete and unfortunate "Saturday Review." The following is the extract:

What a gulf divides the Gladstone of Tory fiction from the Gladstone of real life! Men marvel at his extraordinary vitality and freshness, and much of this is doubtless due to his splendid physique; but much also must be credited to the absence of that all-absorbing ambition which is supposed by so many of his political opponents to be the animating motive of his public life. One of the secrets of health is entire freedom from worries. In this respect Mr. Gladstone's life has been singularly happy. There is no home in England more free from domestic cares and jars than his, and there is probably no man in England who has acquired by habit such complete control over his natural inclinations. When he entered political life he made it a rule to "leave politics," as he has been heard to express it, "outside his bedroom door." He advised Mr. John Bright on one occasion to adopt this rule as a cure for sleeplessness. "Good heavens," exclaimed Mr. Bright, "I can't do that, for I prepare my speeches in bed." Mr. Gladstone's repose, apart from his ordinary hours of sleep, consists in change of mental occupation. He has the faculty of closing at his pleasure one chamber of his mind and opening another. He will return home from a hot debate—perhaps a disastrous division—in the House of Commons, and in ten minutes forget all about it in the ardour of some fresh pursuit. A visitor to Hawarden may spend days without hearing a word about party politics. If he happens to be an early riser he may share Mr. Gladstone's walk to church and back before breakfast, and if he keeps a diary he is certain to hear something at breakfast and in the course of the day which he will not fail to record. After breakfast Mr. Gladstone retires to his library until luncheon, and returns to his sanctuary after luncheon till four o'clock, when he takes his afternoon walk, with any visitors who may be disposed—and who would not be disposed?—to accompany him. He gives up the rest of the day to his family and guests. Much of his leisure just now, we believe, is occupied not in drawing up schemes of Home Rule, or even in preparing speeches for his next Midlothian campaign, but in transferring his large library to the new quarters which he has built for it in the village of Hawarden. He intends, we understand, to leave his books to the public, under certain restrictions, and he is gradually arranging them with his own hands in their new home. Such is the home life of the statesman who is supposed by some to be consumed with the desire to get back to office. It is the penalty of greatness to be misunderstood by outsiders who are close to it. Great men, like great mountains, must be seen at a distance from their base to be appreciated. It is Mr. Gladstone's happy lot to be appreciated in his lifetime far beyond the experience of most great men; but even in his case it will take another generation, purified from the mists of contemporary prejudices, to understand the grandeur of his character.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Prince GEORGE appears to have been made the victim of the reporters during his visit to Montreal. The story that he had asked the Mayor to read the address in English first now turns out to be a canard. But the most serious incidents of his visit is mentioned by the Montreal Witness which says:

Much comment is being made in French-Canadian society circles on the fact that Prince George did not dance with a single French-Canadian lady at the ball! What next?

MR. FREDERIC DOUGLASS, United States Minister to Hayti, has been addressing his colored fellow-citizens at a camp near Baltimore. He says it is utterly false to say that the negroes of Hayti have not shown capacity for self-government. They not only asserted their liberty, but organized a government which they have carried on for 87 years. They have sent their ministers to all Christian lands, and Hayti has never been known to break a treaty. Hayti is only a part of the Island of San Domingo, having 10,000 square miles out of the 32,000 on the island, yet she has a revenue yearly of $7,000,000, and ships 70,000,000 pounds of coffee every year.

An enterprising individual from the United States has recently been honoring the Australian colonies with a visit. He announced himself as Mr. WILLIAM PULLMAN, and claimed to represent the Pullman car company in carrying on negotiations to have the cars of that famous company introduced on the Australian railways. He contrived in some way to secure the endorsation of the United States consul, and was received as a person of such distinction ought to be. He was lavishly entertained by the railway officials and members of the government, and traveled all over the colonies scot free. When the somewhat protracted negotiations were about to concluded and the contract ready to be signed, Mr. WILLIAM PULLMAN mysteriously disappeared. Telegrams were sent to his friends conveying the melancholy news, when the astonishing reply came back that they knew nothing about him, with a request to return the cost of the cable. The colonists console themselves with the reflection that though they have been awfully humbugged they will get the cars anyway.

The substitution of iron for wood in the construction of buildings has caused a falling off, says the Timberman, in the demand for white pine of one-third in six years, and while it charges this fact in a great measure to the decrease in the forest supply, it is attributed largely to the introduction of iron in many capacities in which wood has hitherto been employed. The use of iron for window frames, wire netting for lath, and tiles instead of wood for flooring, is cited in illustration of the substitution going on. The illustration could be multiplied indefinitely. The use of iron girders in the place of wooden joists has become universal in the construction of the more expensive buildings, and the employment of iron frames in such building is a matter of cost merely, these being conceded to be preferable in ever way. The chief factor in this substitution is the relative cost of the materials used in proportion to their durability. In view of the timber famine, which the forestry congress from time to time deplores as contingent upon the timber waste of the country will not be so serious a thing, since it will develop other vast and valuable resources which will be drawn upon for supply.

Canon LIDDON, who was buried with great honors in London, on Tuesday, was the most eminent preacher of his day in the Church of England. He had no living equal in his church as an orator, a logician and a man of profound theological learning. Once when preaching before the Queen, in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, he adopted the manner of the French bishops when preaching before a sovereign, and addressed her as "Madame." The Queen was so offended that she ordered that the canon was never to preach before her again, and he never did. The Queen, up to eight years ago, opposed his preferment to a bisropric, and then when offered to him he declined it. As a preacher he was greatly admired by both GLADSTONE and Lord SALISBURY. He was one of the leaders of the High Church party, and was in his Biblical criticism very conservative, compared with Dean STANLEY and Archdeacon FARRAR. His greatest fame was attained in 1866, when he was "Bampton Lecturer." In that capacity he delivered a course of lectures on "The Divinity of Jesus Christ," that brought him recognition as a great thinker and a profound scholar. The lectures were compiled and published in a volume that has passed through many editions and has been circulated all over the English-speaking world. Canon LIDDON was born in 1829, and was graduated from Oxford in 1850.

ANOTHER VERSION.

TO THE EDITOR.—In your last night's edition, in speaking of the arrest made last Thursday night, you said that the defendant was one of a crowd who gathered to listen to the Salvation Army. But the rest moved on when ordered to do so by Officer Levin, whereas he didn't, and was consequently arrested.

Now, sir, I deny the above charge. When asked to clear the sidewalk I did so with other people, which I can prove. But my doing so did not satisfy the policeman. But as the case will come up in court on Monday, it is not necessary for me to say much more now. When the case is tried the public will know the truth of the matter, and you will be able to give justice where it is due.

THE ARGONAUTS.

Memories of the Voyage from Panama to San Francisco.

"An Argonaut's Reminiscences of a Voyage to the Pacific Coast in 1849," was the title of a paper read before the California Historical Society at the Palace Hotel by James E. Gordon, who arrived in San Francisco September 1, 1849, on the clipper ship Alexander von Humboldt.

The old ship was a Dutch vessel, then only five years old, staunch, strong, but inexperienced seaman. Winds and calms after leaving Panama on Sunday, May 20, 1849, with 335 argonauts for the new El Dorado. The cost of the vessel was $60,000, nearly half of which was realized in the exorbitant fares, which sold almost at auction in Panama. The owners had taken passage money from about twice as many persons as could be accommodated on board, to which a vigorous objection was raised, and a second ship had to be chartered to carry all the passengers.

When lying in the becalmed tropical ocean the hardy argonauts began to lose courage and think of those they had left behind, for the home sentiment was strong in their breasts, and many a tear was seen to course down the young men's cheeks. But when a change of weather came and a favorable wind arose all on board forget the past, and night after night the decks presented gala scenes made musical by the notes of flutes and violins. A supply of villainous food and water had been put on board before sailing, and after two weeks began to show its effects upon the passengers. A hospital was erected on the poop deck and was filled with patients. Suffering followed and there were several deaths.

The 4th of July was saluted at break of day by the ship's cannon, and the American flag was unfurled amid cheers. Literary exercises were held and a banquet of doughnuts and spruce beer at 4 o'clock closed the festivities.

It was necessary to stop at Acapulco for provisions and a sanitary and hygienic change. After leaving that port two young passengers, who shared the same mess in the steerage, fought over some trifle. They were Collis P. Huntington of the Southern Pacific Company and A. M. Starr, the manufacturer of Oakland.

Sixteen years ago there were 100 members of the passenger list alive; today only twenty are living. The only survivor of the three lady passengers is Mrs. Gordon, mother of the speaker. The members in San Francisco are: Collis P. Huntington, A. A. Bennett, R. E. Raymond, S.W. Shaw, B.B. Turner, Captain Taylor and James E. Gordon. Others are scattered over the coast.

INDIAN CONFEDERACY.

Indians to Consult as to How They May Be Liberated From British Law.

A grand council of Indians was held at Deseronto, Ont., on August 26th to consult as to certain injustices which they claim are being done to them by the administration of the country. There were present Chiefs Jos. Brant, Jeremiah Hill, Nelson Zeron, James Zeron, David L. Maracle, Abraham B. Brant, James Brant and Jos. Maracle, Bay of Quinte; John Fraser, Joab Martin, N. H. Burning and Seth Newhouse, Grand River; Mitchel Jacob, Yellow Island, and Joseph Hoggs, St. Regis; Jacob Scanadoah, Onandaga Castle, N. Y.; Mathew Jacob, messenger from Angus Cook, Gibson, Muskoka. The questions before the meeting for consideration were:

1st. What are the privileges and rights of the Indians in the eyes of the British law?

2nd. What is the remedy, and how said Indians are to be liberated from said British law?

It was resolved (1) that the meeting agreed to reform and renew the Oka Confederate Government of the Five Nation Indians as a recognized Government for the Five Nations and such others of the Indians living in North America as having united or wish to unite to the said confederacy. (2) Whereas the meeting have resolved to the following import that the Grand River Indians, Bay of Quinte Indians and St. Regis Indians do appoint a local committee to enquire, search and obtain all the important documents bearing on Indian rights and privileges extant that may be obtained, and said committee to report their proceedings at such time and place as hereinafter stated.

3rd. Resolved, that the corresponding chiefs be hereby appointed the following are therefore appointed as aforesaid: Mitchel Jacob, Yellow Island, St. Regis; Joab Martin Oheweken, Brant County; Jeremiah Hill, Marysville, Hastings County—whose duties shall be to correspond with all persons that may be required and to keep on record all such correspondence that should have been done during their term of office and to report the same to the bands interested as aforesaid.

4th. Resolved that in case the said committee fail to obtain such documents as may be effectively employed in defending the Indian rights, then the said bands shall form such scheme or mode of procedure that may be effectively employed in promoting the several welfare of the Indian races of America, subject to the adoptions of the Confederacy.

Lives of children are often endangered by sudden and violent attacks of cholera, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentry, and bowel complaints. A reasonable and certain precaution is to keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry always at hand.

Racing With Wolves.

Many a thrilling tale has been told by travellers of a race with wolves across the frozen steppes of Russia. Sometimes only the picked bones of the hapless traveller are found to tell the tale. In our own country thousands are engaged in a life and death race against the wolf consumption. The best weapons with which to fight the foe is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This renowned remedy has cured myriads of cases when all other medicines and doctors had failed. It is the greatest blood purifier and restorer of strength known to the world. For all forms of scrofulous affections (and consumption is one of them) it is unequaled as a remedy.

CALIFORNIA TOMS BRAVERY.

He Cleverly Stops a Runaway Horse Before the Grand Stand.

"California Tom," one of the cowboys of the Wild West combination, did a brave thing in the horse ring at the Toronto exhibition on Friday afternoon. It was while the ponies, horses in driving carts and stallions of all classes were being judged, and the ring was a moving mass of animals and men, and the groom in charge of Dr. Campbell's fine black driving mare undertook to make some change in the set of the bridle. At that moment something frightened the animal, and, making a plunge forward, she was away in a moment. Two boys were driving Mr. James Carruthers' pony immediately in front and their cart was overturned and the pony sent plunging wildly about. A policeman managed to grasp the head of the little beast and it was stopped. But Dr. Campbell's mare dashed onward into the heart of the moving mass of horses, swinging the cart from side to side, and for a few moments it looked as if there would be a general stampede. Getting out of the crowd, however, the runaway horse took the track and at a desperate pace came tearing down towards the grand stand. At that time California Tom was recounting his experience with the Wild West show in England to the Empire, and, taking in the situation at a glance, said: "I'll stop that horse!" Running over to the track, he joined with a policeman in trying to head off the horse, but the frightened animal would not be headed. She went flying past. But Tom sprang like a cat at the cart as it whirled by, and in a moment he had climbed in from the rear. Then he grasped the lines, but they only drew the bridle off the mare's neck and showed that it was useless to pull on them. There was no time to be lost, for the runaway was dashing towards the spot where 300 school girls and many ladies and gentlemen were standing. Therefore, without waiting a moment, Tom clambered over the dashboard and sprang on the mare's back. Then, just as she came opposite the grand stand, he swung one foot out, and, resting with the other on the shaft, he dealt the beast a terrific blow with his heel just under her left foreleg. Tom explained afterward that this was a favorite way of winding and throwing a vicious horse out west, and this time it worked instantaneously. The mare fell heavily on her side, and Tom was on her neck in a twinkling. She struggled desperately, but the experienced cowboy knew she could not rise while he kept his knee on her neck. Others crowded around, and the capture was completed. Such cheering as the vast crowd then gave vent to was never before heard on the grounds. A gentleman stepped forward and handed Tom a $5 bill. Mr. William Christie at the same time started around with his hat, and in fifteen minutes Tom was called upon the platform and presented with a hatful of bills and silver, making in all some $60. Asked by the Empire if he had ever stopped a runaway horse before, he said: "Yes; once in New York. But that time the horse had on a bridle, and it was an easier job." It is almost needless to say that California Tom is now the hero of the wild west show, and a lion everwhere. His was a daring act, done at great personal peril and for the safety of the helpless children who were in the line of the terrified runaway.

DR. TALMAGE DRAWS A LESSON FROM THE EXPERIENCE OF RUTH.

The Swift Wing of the Swallow, the Strong Wings of the Eagle and Condor Used as Similes for the Wings of Divine Love.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 14.—The subject of the discourse by Dr. Talmage today was "Wings of Love," the famous preacher taking for his text the words "The Lord [illegible] come to trust." Ruth ii, 12.

Scene—An Oriental harvest field. Grain standing. Grain in swaths. Grain in sheaves.

At the side of the field a white tent in which to take the nooning, jars of vinegar or of sour wine to quench the thirst of the hot working people. Swarthy men striking their sickles into the rustling barley. Others twisting the bands for the sheaves, putting one end of the band under the arm and with the free arm and foot collecting the sheaf. Sunburned women picking up the stray straws and bringing them to the binders. Boaz, a fine looking Oriental, gray bearded and bright faced, the owner of the field, looking on and estimating the value of the grain and calculating so many ephahs to the acre, and with his large, sympathetic heart pitying the overtasked workmen and the women, with white faces enough to faint, in the hot noonday sun. But there is one woman who especially attracts the man's attention. She is soon to be with him the joint owner of the field. She has come from a distant land for the sole purpose of being kind to an aged woman.

I know not what her features were, but when the Lord God sets behind a woman's face the lamp of courage, and faith, and self sacrifice there comes out a glory independent of features. She is to be the ancestress of Jesus Christ. Boaz, the owner of the field, as soon as he understands that it is Ruth, accosts her with a blessing. "A full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust." Christ compares himself to a hen gathering the chickens under her wings. In Deuteronomy God is represented as an eagle stirring up her nest. In a great many places in the psalms David makes ornithological allusions, while my text mentions the wings of God, under which a poor, weary soul had come to trust.

I ask your attention, therefore, while, taking the suggestion of my text, I speak to you in all simplicity and love of the wings of the Almighty.

THE SWIFT WINGS.

First, I remark that they were swift wings under which Ruth had come to trust. There is nothing in all the handiwork of God more curious than a bird's wing. You have been surprised sometimes to see how far it could fly with one stroke of the wing, and when it has food in prospect or when it is affrighted the pulsations of the bird's wing are unimaginable for velocity. The English lords used to pride themselves on the speed of their falcons. These birds, when tamed, had in them the dart of lightning. How swift were the carrier pigeons in the time of Anthony and at the siege of Jerusalem! Wonderful speed! A carrier pigeon was thrown up at Rouen and came down at Ghent—ninety miles off—in one hour. The carrier pigeons were the telegraphs of the olden time. Swallows have been shot in our latitude having the undigested rice of Georgia swamps in their crops, showing that they had come 400 miles in six hours. It has been estimated that, in the ten years of a swallow's life, it flies far enough to have gone around the world eighty-nine times, so great is its velocity.

And so the wings of the Almighty, spoken of in the text, are swift wings. They are swift when they drop upon a foe, and swift when they come to help God's friends. If a father and his son be walking by the way, and his child goes too near a precipice, how long does it take for the father to deliver the child from danger? Longer than it takes God to swoop for the rescue of his children. The fact is that you cannot get away from the care of God. If you take the steamship or the swift rail train he is all the time along with you. "Whither shall I go from thy spirit, and whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven thou art there. If I make my bed in hell behold! thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there thy hand shall hold me."

The Arabian gazelle is swift as the wind. If it gets but one glimpse of the hunter it puts many crags between. Solomon four or five times compares Christ to an Arabian gazelle (calling it by another name) when he says, "My beloved is like a roe." The difference is that the roe speeds the other way. Jesus speeds this. Who but Christ could have been quick enough to have helped Peter when the water pavement broke? Who but Christ could have been quick enough to help the Duke of Argyle when, in his dying moment, he cried: "Good cheer! I could die like a Roman, but I mean to die like a Christian. Come away, gentlemen. He who goes first goes cleanest." I had a friend who stood by the rail track at Carlisle, Pa., when the ammunition had given out at Antietam; and he saw the train from Harrisburg, freighted with shot and shell, as it went thundering down toward the battlefield. He said that it stopped not for any crossing. They put down the brakes for no grade. They held up for no peril. The wheels were on fire with the speed as they dashed past. If the train did not come up in time with the ammunition it might as well not come at all.

So, my friends, there are times in our lives when we must have help immediately or perish. The grace that comes too late is no grace at all. What you and I want is a God—now. Oh! is it not blessed to think that God is always in such quick pursuit of his dear children? When a sinner seeks pardon, or a baffled soul needs help, swifter than thrush's wing, swifter than ptarmigan's wing, swifter than flamingo's wing, swifter than eagle's wing, are the wings of the Almighty.

THE SHELTERING WINGS.

I remark further, carrying out the idea of my text, that the wings under which Ruth had come to trust were very broad wings. There have been eagles shot on the Rocky mountains with wings that were seven feet from tip to tip. When the king of the air sits on the crag the wings are spread over all the eaglets in the eyrie, and when the eagle starts from the rock the shadow is like the spreading of a storm cloud. So the wings of God are broad wings. Ruth had been under those wings in her infantile days; in the days of her happy girlhood in Moab; in the day when she gave her hand to Mahlon, in her first marriage; in the day when she wept over his grave; in the day when she trudged out into the wilderness of poverty; in the days when she picked up the few straws of barley dropped by ancient custom in the way as the poor. Oh! yes, the wings of God are broad wings. They cover up all our wants, all our sorrows, all our sufferings. He puts one wing over our cradle, and he puts the other over our grave. Yes, my dear friends, it is not a desert in which we are placed, it is a nest. Sometimes it is a very hard nest, like that of the eagle, spread on the rock, with ragged moss and rough sticks, but still is a nest; and although it may be very hard under us, over us are the wings of the Almighty. There sometimes comes a period in one's life when he feels forsaken. You said: "Everything is against me. The world is against me. The church is against me. No sympathy, no hope. Everybody [illegible] under if there is a God, anywhere."

Everything seems to be going slipshod and at haphazard. There does not seem to be any hand on the helm. Job's health fails. David's Absalom gets to be a reprobate. Martha's brother dies. Abraham's Sarah goes into the grave of Machpelah. "Woe worth the day in which I was born!" has said many a Christian. David seemed to scream out in his sorrow as he said: "Is his mercy clean gone forever? And will he be favorable no more? And hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies?" Job, with his throat swollen and ulcered until he could not even swallow the saliva that ran into his mouth, exclaims, "How long before thou wilt depart from me and leave me alone, that I may swallow down my spittle?" Have there never been times in your life when you envied those who were buried? When you longed for the gravedigger to do his work for you? Oh, the faithlessness of the human heart! God's wings are broad, whether we know it or not.

THE MOTHERLY WINGS.

Sometimes the mother bird goes away from the nest, and it seems very strange that she should leave the callow young. She plunges her beak into the bark of the tree, and she drops into the grain field, and into the chaff at the barn door, and into the furrow of the plowboy. Meanwhile the birds in the nest shiver and complain and call and wonder why the mother bird does not come back. Ah, she has gone for food. After awhile there is a whirr of wings, and the mother bird stands on the edge of the nest, and the little ones open their mouths and the food is dropped in; and then the old bird spreads out her feathers, and all is peace. So, sometimes, God leaves us. He goes off to get food for our souls, and then he comes back after awhile to the nest, and says: "Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it;" and he drops into it the sweet promises of his grace, and the love of God is shed abroad, and we are under his wings—the broad wings of the Almighty.

Yes, they are very broad. There is room under those wings for the sixteen hundred millions of the race. You say, "Do not get the invitation too large, for there is nothing more awkward than to have more guests than accommodations." I know it. The seamen's friend society is inviting all the sailors. The tract society is inviting all the destitute. The Sabbath schools are inviting all the children. The missionary society is inviting all the heathen. The printing presses of the Bible societies are going night and day, doing nothing but printing invitations to this great gospel banquet. And are you not afraid that there will be more guests than accommodations? No! All who have been invited will not half fill up the table of God's supply. There are chairs for more. There are cups for more. God could with one feather of his wing cover up all those who have come; and when he spreads out both wings they cover all the earth and all the heavens.

Ye Israelites who went through the Red sea, come under! Ye multitudes who have gone into glory for the last six thousand years, come under! Ye hundred and forty-four thousand and the thousands of thousands, come under! Ye flying cherubim and archangel, fold your pinions and come under! And yet there is room! Ay, if God would have all the space under his wings occupied he must make other worlds and people them with other myriads and have other resurrection and judgment days; for broader than all space, broader than thought, wide as eternity from tip to tip are the wings of the Almighty! Oh! under such provision as that can you not rejoice? Come under, ye wandering, ye weary, ye troubled, ye sinning, ye dying souls! Come under the wings of the Almighty. Whosoever will come let him come. However ragged, however wretched, however abandoned, however woe begone, there is room enough under the wings—under the broad wings of the Almighty! Oh, what a gospel! So glorious, so magnificent in its provision! I love to preach it. It is my life to preach it. It is my heaven to preach it.

THE ALMIGHTY WINGS.

I remark, further, that the wings under which Ruth came to trust were strong wings. The strength of a bird's wing—of a sea fowl's wing, for example—you might guess it from the fact that sometimes for five, six or seven days it seems to fly without resting. There have been condors in the Andes that could overcome an ox or a stag. There have been eagles that have picked up children and swung them to the top of the cliffs. The flap of an eagle's wing has death in it to everything it strikes. There are birds whose wings are packed with strength to fly, to lift, to destroy. So the wings of God are strong wings. Mighty to save, Mighty to destroy. I preach him—"the Lord, strong and mighty; the Lord, mighty in battle!" He flapped his wing, and the antediluvian world was gone. He flapped his wing, and Babylon perished. He flapped his wing, and Herculaneum was buried. He flapped his wing, and the Napoleonic dynasty ceased.

Before the stroke of that pinion a fleet is nothing. An army is nothing. An empire is nothing. A world is nothing. The universe is nothing. King—eternal, omnipotent—he asks no counsel from the thrones of heaven. He takes not the archangel into his cabinet. He wants none to draw his chariots, for they are the winds. None to load his batteries, for they are the lightnings. None to tie the sandals of his feet, for they are the clouds. Mighty to save. Our enemies may be strong, our sorrows violent. Our sins may be great. But quicker than an eagle ever hurled from the crags a hawk or raven will the Lord strike back our sins and our temptations if they assault us when we are once seated on the eternal rock of his salvation. What a blessed thing it is to be defended by the strong wing of the Almighty! Stronger than the pelican's wing, stronger than the albatross' wing, stronger than the condor's wing are the wings of the Almighty.

I have only one more thought to present. The wings under which Ruth had come to trust were gentle wings. There is nothing softer than a feather. You have noticed when a bird returns from flight how gently it stoops over the nest. The young birds are not afraid of having their lives trampled out by the mother bird. The old whip-poor-will drops into its nest of leaves, the oriole into its casket of bark, the humming bird into its hammock of moss—gentle as the light. And so, says the Psalmist, he shall cover thee with his wing. Oh, the gentleness of God! But even that figure does not fully set it forth, for I have sometimes looked into the bird's nest and seen a dead bird—its life having been trampled out by the mother bird. But no one that ever came under the feathers of the Almighty was trodden on.

THE BEAUTIFUL WINGS.

Blessed nest! warm nest! Why will men stay out in the cold to be shot of temptation and to be chilled by the blast when there is divine shelter? More beautiful than any flower I ever saw are the hues of a bird's plumage. Did you ever examine it? The blackbird, floating like a flake of darkness through the sunlight; the meadow lark, with a head of fawn and throat of velvet and breast of gold; the red flamingo, flying over the southern swamps like sparks from the forge of the setting sun; the pelican, white and black—morning and night tangled in its wings—give but a very faint idea of the beauty that comes down over the soul when on it drop the feathers of the Almighty. Here fold your weary wings. This is the only safe nest. Every other nest will be destroyed. The prophet says so. "Though thou exalt thyself like the eagle, and set thy nest among the stars, yet will I bring thee down, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Under the swift wings, under the broad wings, under the strong wings, under the gentle wings of the Almighty find shelter until these calamities be overpast. Then when you want to change nests it will only be from the valley of earth to the heights of heaven; and instead of "the wings of a dove," for which David longed, not knowing that in the first mile of their flight they would give out, you will be conducted upward by the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings Ruth, the beautiful Moabitess, came to trust.

God forbid that in this matter of eternal weal or woe we should be more stupid than the fowls of heaven; "for the stork knoweth her appointed time; and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow observe the time of their going, but my people know not the judgments of the Lord."

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

FIRE PREVENTION.

The City Council Consider the New By-law.

A special meeting of the city council was held in the City Hall last evening for the purpose of considering the new fire prevention by-law. There were present His Worship the Mayor and all the aldermen, with the exception of Messrs. Goodacre and Vigelius. The by-law was taken up clause by clause, and after about two hours had been passed as amended, the further reading was adjourned until Tuesday evening.

A communication was read from Mr. Mohun asking for the position of sewerage engineer at a salary of $3000 per annum. It was referred to the sewerage committee.

A communication from Returning Officer Bull, giving the result of the vote taken on the sewerage and fire engine house by-laws, was read and ordered to be spread upon the minutes.

An invitation from the Westminster agricultural show requesting the mayor and aldermen to go to Westminster during the exhibition, was accepted with thanks. The council adjourned at 10.20.

FROM THE NORTH.

Boisterous Weather Met With on the Skeena—The Islander.

The steamer Barbara Boscowitz arrived from the north at 11 o'clock last night with the following passengers: Mr. Stapledon and family, A. French, W. S. Robertson, Mr. Broche, and about 50 steerage. As freight she brought 6100 cases and 500 barrels of salmon, and a lot of box wood. The trip was an unusually disagreeable one, fog, rain, sleet and wind being met with both up and down.

Rev. Mr. Hopkins of Rivers Inlet came part of the way down on the Boscowitz, his house having been burned but a few days before the Boscowitz came down. Mr. Stapledon brought his family down and they intend to reside here permanently.

The Princess Louise arrived down at 6 o'clock this morning with the following cabin passengers: Geo. Durmit, Geo. Clough, W. Beckman, Wm. Mason, L. B. Sutters, T. Robinson, P. McLean, W. L. Brett, Jno. Collins, W. Boxburgh, L. Banks and R. E. Phillips. She also brought 130 steerage passengers, 8923 cases of salmon and a lot of miscellaneous freight. Capt. McCulloch states that he never saw such bad weather as he met in the Skeena. The Islander was passed at Rivers Inlet, all hands enjoying themselves. Captain Waldran, who went up on the Louise, was transferred to the Islander and will go to Queen Charlotte Islands with Capt. Irving.

PINAFORE TROUPE FATE.

A Sad Accident on the Sound Vividly Described.

Mrs. Story's amateur opera company have returned from Victoria, where they very successfully rendered the popular comic opera, Pinafore, to a crowded house. A correspondent, writing under the nom-de-plume, "Pro Bono Publico," submits the following:

Johnny Lee a fishermen was,
Who sailed the ocean blue,
He owned an antique mud scow,
And was captain, cook and crew.

He had a wife and twelve small Lees,
Whom he left at his seaside home
To live on clams, and fish, and shrimps,
While he wandered o'er the foam.

A run to Whatcom he'd sometime take
In his mud scow, the "Golden Gate,"
And he'd sail away nor easily nor
'Till the hour got quite late.

One day when off Deception Pass,
Away on the starboard bow
He spied a wreck that seemed to be
A sinking at the prow.

He left his pipe, then went aloft
To view the vessel's deck,
Then quickly changed his mud scow's course
To overhaul the wreck.

He shouted through a stove-pipe,
"Did you ever tre to swim?"
The answer, "Hard y ever,"
Came re-echoed back to him.

"We're a Pinafore troupe from Seattle,
"For Victoria we're bound,
"And our sisters, cousins and our aunts
"Will weep if we are drowned!"

Again he changed his mud scow's course,
And well, 'twas he swore,
And said, "You may go to Hal'y x,
"With your thunder as P'nafore!"

"Did ever you see such a heathen wretch!
"Came wafted o'er the wave,
"Well, hard'y ev——" He looked around,
They had gone to a watery grave.

Alaska Items.

The S. S. Mexico, en route for Alaska is expected to-night or early Sunday morning.

Capt. Carroll who arrived this a. m. on the Umatilla will take passage on the Mexico to Alaska to look after business interests there. It is probable that Capt. Carroll will be a delegate to the U. S. Congress from Alaska this coming winter.

The Tacoma Smelter.

The first bullion, amounting to about $23,000, was drawn off at the Tacoma Smelting and Refining Company's new works on Thursday. The fires under the big furnace have been burning ever since Monday morning, and 50 tons of ore melted. Until the company builds its own refinery, which they intend to do very soon, the base bullion will be sent to Chicago to be refined.

The Queen Pays All Expenses.

The Queen's last "Free Trip to Europe" having excited such universal interest, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 extra for expenses, to the person sending the largest list of English words constructed from letters contained in the words "British North America." Additional prizes, consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes, Portiere Curtains, Silk Dresses, Mantel Clocks, and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin Jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to the girl or boy (delivered free in Canada or United States), sending largest lists. Everyone sending a list of not less than twenty words will receive a present. Send four 3c. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample number of the Queen.

From Behring Sea.

The schooner Maggie Mac, Capt. Dodd, arrived from Behring Sea last evening with a catch of 1952 skins for the season. She has the same weather reports as the other schooners. She spoke several of the whaling fleet and all are reported well. She also spoke the schooners Allie J. Adler, Aug. 15th, with 1235, the Minnie, Aug. 16th, with 2250, and the Black Diamond, with 1700. She left Behring Sea Aug. 31st, and had light variable winds down.

Free Advertising.

During the meeting of the council last evening Ald. Smith called the attention of the aldermen that certain persons make a practice of using the electric light poles belonging to the city for advertising mediums. He said he had instructed the police to prosecute any person found doing so, and hereafter advertisers will have to look in other quarters for advertising purposes.

Beautiful Women.

The magical efforts of Wisdom's Robertine as a beautifer and preserver of the complexion have been attested by thousands of leading ladies of society and the stage. It is the only article ever discovered which gives a natural and beautiful tint to the complexion, removing tan, sunburn, freckles and all roughness of the face and arms, leaving the skin soft, smooth and velvety. All remarks on its delightfuly cooling and refreshing properties, a distinction not found in any other similar article known. D. E. Campbell, agent.

House Numbering in Westminster.

The contract has been let for numbering the houses in Westminster to Mr. James Henderson, who has placed an order at the Westminster foundry for the moulding of the necessary characters. T. R. Williams, of Victoria, tendered at 8 cents per number. The amount of Mr. Henderson's tender was 25 cents per character. It has been arranged that there shall be a number at every twenty feet of distance along the street, so as to avoid the necessity of having the streets renumbered for some time to come, and also obviate the use of half numbers.

He Knew the House.

Several times lately the residents of a house on Courtney street, just below Douglas, have missed small articles of clothing, umbrellas, etc. The value of the things did not amount to much and nothing was said of it until last evening, when one of the women of the house went to her room and found a Chinaman, who had formerly worked there, going through her box in which she keeps her small change. On being asked what he was doing, John said, "You owe me dollar quarter." The woman not being able to handle the Chinaman, bowed him out and immediately sent for the police, but up to the present time the thief has not been detected. The visits were generally made during supper time and of course John had taken note of the time when no one was likely to be in the room and made his evening call accordingly.

Too Much Fun.

During the early hours this morning Officer Smith heard a noise on Fort street, that he thought might disturb the slumbers of the residents round about, and so he proceeded to investigate. He found a hack with two men and two women in it, who were evidently painting the town red. The officer slowly creeped up and seized what he thought to be a man and woman, marched them off to the police station. He found, however, when he got to the station that both were women, and that the men who had run at the sight of a police officer, were non est. The two came up in the police court this morning, and one who pleaded not guilty was fined $10 and the other who pleaded guilty was let off at half price.

FORT RUPERT MINES.

Mr. L. Banks Arrived Down With the Result of Borings.

Lyman Banks, representing the Oregon Improvement Company, who recently bonded 9,000 acres of land at Fort Rupert, arrived down by the Grapler Boston this morning. He brought with him boxes, large quantities of cores, the result of the borings, which will be shipped to Portland by the Kingston to-morrow evening. He is very reticent about the result of the borings and will not say whether they have struck it rich or not.

CHILLIWHACK EXHIBITION.

Fair Weather—Large Attendance—Excellent Exhibit and Great Success.

CHILLIWHACK, Sept. 19.—The exhibition of the Chilliwhack Agricultural Society, which opened on Thursday and closed yesterday, was more successful in many respects than any hitherto held. The stock was superior to anything ever shown here before, an evidence that the more careful breeding introduced by the farmers is having its effect. Fruit was also above the average, but the grain department was deficient in number of samples, although the quality was first class. The dairy was well represented, and a decided improvement was noticeable. That the days of bad butter are over in Chilliwhack, and the days of eastern importation are nearing an end, is a lesson that may be drawn from the success of the Chilliwhack dairymen and dairywomen. The greater attraction of the Westminster exhibition, to be held next week, no doubt had a tendency to diminish the interest in the local show, but notwithstanding this and the fact that harvesting is still in progress, the result was most encouraging to the farmers of the district.

SAVE YOUR EYESIGHT.

An Early Call Should be Made Upon Mr. Seward, the Great Optician.

A rare opportunity to secure perfect fitting glasses, carefully adapted to any impairment or defect of the vision, is presented by the visit here of F. D. Seward, the scientific optician from New York City, who will be at the Driard for a short time only.

Many prominent citizens, ladies, physicians and clergymen of Victoria, have already availed themselves of his services, and his parlors are crowded all the time. There is no question as to his skill for he carries the highest endorsements from leading oculists and physicians all over the United States, as well as hundreds of letters of thanks and praise from gratified patrons who have worn his fine glasses and found them perfect and pleasant.

Twelve years of constant study of optics and twenty thousand pleased patrons afford ample evidence of Mr. Seward's skill as an optician. He can stay in Victoria but a short time, hence those who desire fine glasses, accurately fitted, should call immediately at the Driard.

PROF. BRYCE

A Distinguished Visitor—Author of "American Commonwealth."

Prof. James Bryce, M. P. for South Aberdeen, and author of the "American Commonwealth," arrived at Vancouver on Friday and will reach Victoria to-night. His trip is for pleasure and observation. Mr. Bryce visited Victoria in 1881, coming here via San Francisco. It was his intention to have taken the Alaskan trip, but finds that it is too late in the season. The Professor was indisposed to speak to a Vancouver reporter of the trade relations between the United States and Canada on the ground that he was not accurately informed on the questions. In speaking of the Behring sea trouble, he said that as the results of the negotiations between the two governments had not yet been placed before the members of Parliament, he was not in a position to speak with any degree of accuracy as to the probable settlement to be arrived at. He felt confident, however, that nothing could possibly occur which would involve the nations in war. The feeling between the great mass of the people was now so friendly that the Behring sea question would not disturb it to any appreciabe extent. In replying to a question as to how the English people would regard political union between the Dominion and the United States, he said that the colonies were now coming in for a greater share of attention than they had hitherto received at home, and that the loss of any of her colonial dependencies would be regarded by England with regret. He did not think, however, that a desire for closer political relations with the States was strong in Canada. He had not been able to perceive any such desire, and he was at a loss to see what could prompt it. As far as internal government went, Canada was perfectly independent of England, while she had the benefit of England's protection in the event of trouble with the outside world. He did not see what Canada could possibly gain by such an union. He spoke with evident pleasure of the friendly feeling which he had observed everywhere in the United States for Englishmen and which he had personally experienced, and he said that the feeling was equally strong in England for Americans. The antipathy which had been said to exist in both countries he had seen nothing of. The professor is a member of the Liberal party and watches the foreign policy of the Government in the interest of the Opposition.

Didn't Turn Up.

When the crew of the schooner Ocean Belle were paid off a few days ago one of the men complained that he got $40 less than what was due him. Collector Milne told the man to make out a written account, and he went out evidently with the intention of doing so, but has not yet turned up. Nobody seems to know what has caused his negligence, but it is rumored that some serious accusations have been made against him, although no official charge has been laid.

Nanaimo's Labor Day.

This is Labor Day in Nanaimo, the first observance of the kind ever held in that city. The weather was fine, and a telegram informs us that everything passed off very successfully.

In Distress.

As the steamer Umatilla was off Cape Blanco on her way up she sighted a British bark signalling distress. Her sails were hanging over and her masts were sprung. She asked that a tug be sent to assist her which will be done when the steamer gets to Port Townsend.

Where Are Victoria Girls.

The following want ad. published in the San Francisco Examiner might be a hint to Victoria girls to look out for their laurels:

A YOUNG ENGLISHMAN DESIRES ACquaintance of a respectable lady, aged from 18 to 26, dark complexion, with about $200 to take share in established business; object matrimony; no trifler. Address G. B., No. — Government street, Victoria, B. C.

Will not Last Long.

The boot and shoe stock that is being cleared out by R. Hilbert at 74 Yates street, will not last much longer. Mr. Myers, who has charge of the store, says that the stock is pretty well broken already, and that it wont be long before it will all be cleared out. Anybody in want of bargains will do well to call and examine the stock and prices before it is all gone. s18-1w.

A Grand Celebration.

Parties who were in San Francisco during the Native Sons' celebration of Admission Day, state that it was one of the grandest sights that could possibly be witnessed. It took the procession, 14 deep, three hours and five minutes to pass a given point. The city was grandly decorated and everybody put on holiday attire. Thousands of strangers were in the city, which made it look busier than ever. Seventy-five bands of music joined the procession and discoursed music all day.

Must be Sober.

Collector Milne of the custom house has announced that the law which provides that no seaman will be paid off while in a state of intoxication, will be strictly enforced at this port, and hereafter men will have to be perfectly sober when they sign the articles and also when being paid off. This move is being made by the collector out of consideration for the men, who when they get their money while intoxicated, are liable to lose or be robbed of it before they have been ashore any time.

Arrested on Suspicion.

Last evening the sealer who was robbed at the Vancouver house yesterday morning spotted the man who had slept in his room at the time he was robbed, and handed him over to the police. At the station he gave the name of J. Roland, and said he was a fisherman having recently sold out at Port Blakely. He pleaded not guilty in the police court, and asked for a remand, which was granted until Monday, so that he can obtain the services of a lawyer to defend him. He was also booked for carrying a concealed weapon, and that charge will come up after the first one is disposed of.

Notice.

The British Columbia Art Association respectfully invite the public of Victoria to place on view at the art collection in the City Hall any works of art such as vases, bronzes, carving, China, or other articles representative of art, which will be received not later than Monday, the 22d instant. A tag with name of owner should be attached to the article so loaned with a descriptive notice of the same if deemed necessary by the contributor. One of the hanging committee will be in attendance each day from 9 to 12 and 2 to 5. Every regard will be paid to all articles so sent in, and they will be included in an insurance already effected upon the contents of the exhibition. s19-2t.

His Sight Can Be Restored.

Mr. Jackson, a well-known citizen of Victoria, called at the Driard yesterday to see the celebrated optician, Mr. F. D. Seward and to learn if there was any hope of recovering his sight. As is well known Mr. Jackson has been totally blind for four years. Mr. Seward diagnosed the case as cataract on both eyes, which could be operated upon with hardly one chance in ten of failure, it being almost certain that the sight would be restored in one, and probably both eyes. As Mr. Seward is not practicing medicine, or opthalmic surgery, Jackson was advised to go under the care of a competent oculist, but as he claimed to be too poor to do this, Mr. Seward gave him the address of a celebrated St. Louis oculist, whom he knew would see the operation skilfully performed without money and without price. Mr. Jackson left the Driard with grateful tears flowing from his sightless eyes, and is determined to follow the advice given him by Mr. Seward.

DON'T DO IT!

DON'T dispute with your Wife, when she says Cameron's goods are the only ones to buy; because she knows what she's talking about.

DON'T argue with her when she says that Cameron's prices are money-savers. She talks like a sensible woman who knows what's what.

DON'T try to excuse yourself for going to some other store instead of Cameron's. You know that you can offer no reason that can be sufficient and satisfactory for passing the store where the best and cheapest go together.

DON'T expect your wife to meet you pleasantly, if you've gone to some other store than Cameron's, when she expressly told you to go nowhere else. Don't do any of these things if you expect to live long in the land and keep your hair on.
